I failed out of college when I was 18 years old. In three quick quarters my life plan changed. Looking back at the choices I made to get me from that point to this, there is one thing that I would have changed: making and sustaining connections to other people, particularly to other single Moms enrolled in college.

I found my way back into higher education at the age of 31 as the parent of two young children (6 and 3 years old at the time). We survived on public assistance (AFDC, Food Stamps, Medical Assistance, Food Shelves, and the unforgettable contributions of many community organizations). My children learned that we had enough and that rarely what we need had a price tag. I completed my undergraduate degree in Psychology and Women’s Studies in 1994 and my masters in 1997 in Counseling and Student Personnel (both from Minnesota State University, Mankato). It was a tough time in my life—parenting, working, attending college full-time—trying to balance it all and achieve my goals.

The lessons I learned from that time:

- If you need help, ask and keep asking until you find what you need.
- I can’t do this alone.
- Adult learners (formerly known as non-traditional students) are still arriving to college campuses to achieve their educational goals and transform themselves and their lives. At one time ISU and GSB funded Off Campus & Adult Student Services that supported the needs and provided services to students living off campus and to adult learners. This office was one of the first casualties of severe State budget cuts.

Today there are still places and people to support the academic success of off campus and adult students—their offices are scattered across the campus, but we still care. At Margaret Sloss Women’s Center (MSWC) we have several links on our website (address below) that provide skills, tools, and resources to assistance adult students as they navigate their way through the ISU system. The College of Human Sciences offers a learning community specifically for adult students called A.N.T.S (Adult, Non-Traditional Students). They meet twice a week in MacKay Hall during the lunch hour and have a variety of other social activities being planned. Contact A.N.T.S. by emailing ants@iastate.edu

Welfare was “reformed” in 1996 which resulted in many single Mothers being forced in to jobs that do not pay a livable wage or provide insurance. The MSWC website also has a link to agencies, offices, and religious organizations in the Ames/Story County community that offer a variety of financial resources. This financial support can assist with rent, utilities, phone, gas, etc. It might be “the” thing that gets a single parent to the next month.

The MSWC also provides a variety of ways to network with other students. Check out our calendar for Knit-Wits, Graduate Women’s Network, and coming soon Women’s Awakening! Hanging on to each other is important as you find your way to your goal.

I found my way back to higher education and higher education saved my life and the lives of my children. They are both college students today and have not forgotten the years of having enough. I’m glad they don’t remember how scared I was that this wasn’t going to work. Two quotes helped to keep me going:

“What we call failure is not the falling down, but staying down.”
Mary Pickford

“Hope is the feeling that the feeling you have isn’t permanent.”
Jean Kerr

Sexual Assault Awareness Month:
How to get involved!

Sexual Assault Awareness Month dates back to the late 1970s when women in England organized Take Back the Night marches to protest against violence that they encountered when they walked in the streets at night. Since then, Sexual Assault Awareness Month has increased awareness and prevention of sexual violence against both men and women. Iowa State University will offer many programs, events, and resources in the month of April. Events that have been included in Sexual Assault Awareness Month in previous years include:

• Take Back the Night
• A Sign-Making Workshop
• An Art Show
• The Clothesline Project
• A SART flag display on central campus
• A poetry slam

Planning for Sexual Awareness Month will begin in November. If you are interested in helping out with planning or volunteering, contact Som at SMongtin@gmail.com.

Vagina Monologues Auditions!

The Vagina Warriors, the feminist group on campus has an introductory meeting Oct 14th in the Sloss House from 7pm-8pm. We also are going to be having auditions for The Vagina Monologues Oct 19th 1-4pm, Oct 20th 11am-3pm, and Oct 21st 6-9pm. V-Day is a global movement to end violence against women and girls that raises funds and awareness through benefit productions of Playwright/Founder Eve Ensler's award winning play "The Vagina Monologues." In 2006, more than 2700 V-Day events in 1150 communities and colleges took place in the U.S. and around the world. To date, V-Day has raised over $35 million and educated millions about the issue of violence against women and the efforts to end it. Funds from Iowa State University’s V-Day event will be donated to Assault Care Center Extending Shelter and Support (ACCESS). To learn more about the V-Day Campaign access the official website at: http://www.vday.org

Nominations Sought for Margaret Sloss Gender Equity Scholarship & Awards

Margaret Sloss was the first woman to graduate from the College of Veterinary medicine at Iowa State University. She earned her bachelor’s degree in zoology from Iowa State in 1923 and her master's degree in veterinary anatomy in 1932. Despite an unwritten policy against admitting women as veterinary students, Dean Stange let her accumulate credits in the veterinary medical curriculum, and in August 1938, Margaret Sloss was awarded a D.V.M. degree. She grew up on the Iowa State University campus where her father was Superintendent of Grounds. Her childhood home is now the location of the Margaret Sloss Women’s Center, which was established there in 1981.

The Women’s Center Advisory Board is requesting your assistance in nominating candidates for the Third Annual Margaret Sloss Gender Equity Award. Nominees of the Margaret Sloss Gender Equity Award should have demonstrated a commitment to helping women gain equity within the university and/or the Ames community. Significant contributions come in many forms, from public acts such as organizational leadership to personal acts such as academic and professional mentoring. Examples include:

• Demonstrating an unusual and unique effort to promote gender equity in the classroom, university or community
• Promoting the development of policies and procedures designed to achieve gender equity;
• Developing or strengthening programs aimed at a scholarly understanding of women and gender roles;
• Promoting the respect of human diversity and the rights of women.

Those eligible for the Margaret Sloss Gender Equity Award include Iowa State faculty and staff, Iowa State undergraduate and graduate students, and Ames community members. The awards will be presented at the Margaret Sloss Gender Equity Awards Reception on February 19, 2009 at 5:30 p.m. in the Campanile Room of the Memorial Union. More information about the Reception will be available in December.

Please show your support for those who work for equity on campus and within the community by nominating them for the Margaret Sloss Gender Equity Award. Nominations may be made by ISU faculty, staff, and students or by members of the Ames community. Nomination forms are available online: http://www.dso.iastate.edu/wc/msgea/.

The deadline for submitting nominations is Wednesday, December 17, 2008.

For more information, contact Marissa Klousie at 294-4154 or mklousie@iastate.edu.

Lucretia Mott was born in 1793 and was brought up in the Quaker faith which was really important to her. She was a minister and prominent abolitionist. She started giving speeches about abolition in 1818. In 1840 Lucretia was selected as a delegate to the World's Anti-Slavery Convention in London. Even though she was selected, she was not allowed to participate in the convention because she was a woman. Lucretia met Elizabeth Cady Stanton, whose husband was a delegate at the convention. The two talked about the fact that they couldn’t participate in the convention. Lucretia and Elizabeth decided to have a mass meeting about women’s rights.

When they came back to the states they met again and planned a meeting for women’s rights in 1848. At the Seneca Falls Convention this group presented the Declaration of Sentiments. The Declaration of Sentiments was written using the language and structure of the United States Declaration of Independence. This document holds great importance because it was the first document to assert women’s independence in the United States and addressed property rights and the right to vote. The document was signed by one hundred people — 2/3rds women and 1/3rd men. Lucretia Mott is one of the first women to advocate for the full political participation of women in this country.

Breast Cancer Awareness Month

The National Breast Cancer Awareness Month (NBCAM) program is dedicated to increasing awareness about the importance of the early detection of breast cancer through a nationwide campaign. NBCAM started as a week long campaign in 1985 with 2 founding members. During October, which is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, the members of the campus and surrounding community join forces to spread the message that early detection of breast cancer followed by prompt treatment saves lives. Collaborative meetings begin in early fall semester.

Each year the Margaret Sloss Women's Center teams up with Sigma Lambda Gamma and the Student Union Board to put on events for Breast Cancer Awareness. This year's events include a bake sale, a t-shirt swap and a breast cancer awareness rally. Check out the calendar for details!

For more information, contact Val Erwin at 294-4154 or verwin@iastate.edu.

Seeking Alone…
So many times here at school
I find that I’m really in the minority.
I end up being the voice,
you can ask for assistance,
but sometimes people don’t feel
the need that you see.

I think it’s important for people to keep saying that.
I do that here, even if I am in the minority.
I still keep saying,
“But!”
“What about?”
“Have you thought about this?”

And sometimes I get support,
but a lot of times,
you just cannot get someone else
to see your ideas as important.

A lot of the things we know,
and if we don’t sit around and discuss them,
they kind of go to the back part of our minds,
and you just forget about them.

When you’re not truly who you are
you can’t exist,
and I just reached that point.
I was either going to leave teaching or something had to change.

I’m working as hard as I can
to stay positive.

Finding Together…
We always have choices,
Even though we may feel like we don’t,
And listening to other people talk,
Gives me a sense of having some power.

Just to get with a group of people who can say,
“yes, I understand that,”
Helps a lot.

Because it’s nice to talk with other people
Struggling with the same issues
And who even see them as issues.

My first grade daughter Adelade joined the Daisy Girl Scout Troop 18 this fall. Chatting recently with one of the troop leaders, Jana Stenback, I mentioned Adelade’s inclination to speak up for what she prefers, in this case cheddar to American cheese. Jana added that all the girls were outspoken. In fact, she said this troop reminded her of when she used to lead Cub Scouts! We both stopped to recognize what a positive step this comparison represented.

MSWC Advisory Board President

October 15th marked the National Organization for Women (NOW) Foundation’s eleventh annual Love Your Body Day. According to the Now Foundation, this event was coordinated in response to unhealthy and exploitative images of women in the media to promote positive, healthy images of women and girls, protest harmful and offensive advertisements, and raise awareness about women’s health issues. We had the opportunity this year to work with several offices and groups across campus who do this work daily. While the official event has come and gone, I want to encourage everyone to Love Your Body EVERY Day. I hope that we can all take the messages learned from Love Your Body Day to remember how we all participate in a society that perpetuates unrealistic, unhealthy, and ultimately dangerous representations of women. Let’s continue to have these conversations. Let’s stop talking about our weight as a function of our beauty and self-worth and instead talk about our overall health. If we each begin to reframe our own thinking, we can interrupt the unrealistic expectations that are put on women to look like the models in magazines — the airbrushed, digitally altered images that are presented as real women. Thank you to everyone who participated and made this event successful!
